and scientific means. The best effort could not guarantee warning of a surprise attack. 661/

Related programs (covert operations) would require increasing money and manpower. The chief difficulty was in the recruitment and training of personnel. Increased use of military personnel would be necessary. 662/

This was the last such report rendered by Bedell Smith as DCI.

25X1A A crude measure of the intensification of CIA's activity is the growth of the Agency's personal strength from [] in October 1950 to [] in January 1953.* The growth of particular Offices is indicated in the table below. 664/
